ARMANDO ANDRADE TUDELA

b. Lima, Perù 1975

Lives and works in Lyon (France)

Armando Andrade Tudela was born in 1975 in Lima, Perù. After attending the Pontifical Catholic University of Perù, he moved to Europe where he studied at the Royal College of Art in London and at the Jan Van Eyck Akademie in Maastricht. He currently lives and works in Lyon.

The artist explores the intersecting interfaces between popular culture, politics and fine art. While frequently using the South American cultural and historical context as his starting point, on a deeper level Andrade Tudela's work focuses on complex systems of translation and transference; how are aesthetic ideas assimilated and reactivated politically, or socially, at a local level? And more broadly speaking, how are ideas themselves embedded within the fabric of geography and physical topography?

He moves freely among a wide range of media and material. In his in-depth, research-driven projects, he frequently employs quasi-documentary techniques, such as recorded interviews and on-site photographic explorations, combining them with multiple references to history, politics and popular culture. At the same time, his drawings and objects combine visual directness and technical accomplishment with conceptual complexity.

By focusing on sites of temporal and geographic slippage, Andrade Tudela parses the hidden inner rhymes and subtle discordances within cultural history, ultimately undermining and even dismantling the cultural and historic framing structures his work examines.

Recent exhibitions include: No Despide Iuz, Museo de Arte de Lima - MALI, Lima; Lima Chosen Memories, MoMA, New York; Itinerarios XXVII, Centro Botín, Santander and Burlado, Burlado, Proyecto AMIL, Lima. He has represented Peru at the Gwangju Biennale 2024.

His work is part of some of the most important international institutional collections such as: Centre Pompidou, Paris; Museo de Arte de Lima - MALI, Lima; Museum fur Moderne Kunst, Frankfurt; Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofia, Madrid; MACBA, Barcelona; MoMA, New York; Tate, London; Castello di Rivoli, Turin; Guggenheim Museum, New York.

ARMANDO ANDRADE TUDELA
WITH DANIEL STEEGMANN MANGRANÉ
voler leggere la schiuma

Opening 14 September 2021
Until 6 November 2021

"I want to write but froth comes out,
I want to say so much but I get stuck;
every spoken cipher is a sum,
every written pyramid has its core"

Cesar Vallejo, Intensity and Height, Human Poems, 1938 (posthumous)

voler leggere la schiuma is an impossible act, a playful and intriguing challenge.

Forms blend into one another, they transform, evolve. Their edges are undefined, you've got to grab them and hold them at just the right moment in order to realize what will, perhaps, remain only an intuition.

Armando Andrade Tudela and Daniel Steegmann Mangrané, connected by a long friendship and a profound exchange of reflections on art, play together with the construction of forms that, despite seeming recognizable and familiar, cannot be traced back to any specific reference point, whether natural or cultural or technological.

The gallery becomes a fluid place, where at times we are invited to enter, and others we remain trapped in a section of it, forced into a sort of short circuit that continuously makes us move, see and reconsider the space, step forwards and step backwards, to check if by chance we have missed some small detail or hint that can help us interpret the works, which seem to be so clear and familiar, yet indescribable. Perhaps, instead of straining to understand them, we should surrender ourselves to emotion and dissolve with them.

voler leggere la schiuma is a place of uncertainty, a space where we must renegotiate our relationship to reality.

The two artists' works pose continuous questions, transcending our certainties. It questions our convictions, our wish to interpret and organize the knowable into a pre-established outline, and the artists have photographed just one possible instant of this process in continuous movement, theirs, amusing themselves then by sensing what ours might be.

"Voglio scrivere e mi viene fuori schiuma, voglio dire moltissimo e m'ingolfo;
ogni cifra parlata è successione, ogni scritta piramide ha il suo nucleo"

Cesar Vallejo, Intensità e altezza, da Poemi Umani, 1938 (postumo)

voler leggere la schiuma è un atto impossibile, una sfida intrigante e giocosa.

Le forme sfumano, si trasformano, evolvono. I contorni sono indefiniti, bisogna acchiapparli e fermarli in un momento preciso per poter concretizzare quella che resterà, forse, solo un'intuizione.

Armando Andrade Tudela e Daniel Steegmann Mangrané, legati da anni da una lunga amicizia e dalla profonda condivisione di riflessioni artistiche, giocano insieme alla costruzione di forme che, pur apparente riconoscibili e familiari, non possono essere ricondotte ad alcun riferimento specifico, sia esso naturale o culturale o tecnologico.

La galleria diventa un luogo fluido in cui alle volte siamo invitati ad entrare, altre restiamo intrappolati in una sezione di esso, costretti in una specie di corto circuito che ci fa continuamente muovere, vedere e riconsiderare lo spazio, andare avanti e tornare indietro, per controllare se per caso ci siamo persi qualche piccolo dettaglio o anticipazione che ci possa aiutare nella lettura delle opere che sentiamo così chiara e familiare, ma indescrivibile. Forse, più che sforzarci di comprenderle, dovremmo abbandonarci all'emozione di dissolverci con esse.

voler leggere la schiuma è luogo dell'incertezza, spazio dove occorre rinegoziare il proprio rapporto con la realtà.

I lavori dei due artisti pongono domande continue, trascendendo le nostre certezze. Le convinzioni, il desiderio di leggere e incasellare lo scibile in una griglia prestabilita viene messo in discussione e di questo processo in continuo movimento, gli artisti fotografano un solo possibile istante, il loro, divertendosi a intuire quale potrebbe essere il nostro.

Post Folklore

Opening 18 November 2015
Until 23 December 2015

For his first solo show in Milan, Armando Andrade Tudela presents a group of works produced entirely in 2015. With the title Post-Folklore, these pieces provide both a sense of continuity and of breaking off in the progress of the artist's work. Materials and forms are repeated with different uses and configurations and become at the same time an iteration of a previous work and its opposite.

According to the artist, the assimilation of culture (and of its aesthetic models) is a process of layering that is for the most part involuntary: as with archaeology, it is the mold upon which infinite factors have intervened to determine its current form.

Armando Andrade Tudela's works thus become a practical exercise of a personal need to comprehend and reorganize knowledge. Cultural paradigms become dense grids over great mirrored surfaces. The layering of knowledge is transformed into a precise methodology, a long process that gives form to postmodern architectures in plaster. The history of the world is grafted on to the artist's personal story (the module repeated throughout the collages is the card of a pastry shop he used to frequent).

In Andrade Tudela's works similar elements give life to different forms, making it impossible to distinguish between mold and cast, cause and effect. What is important is the process that leads to the creative event, to the artistic object.

The works share a common ground. From the sculptures resembling a phalanx stretched out over the floor, to the high mirrors on the wall, the majority of these works center around the concepts of stability, balance, verticality and spatial composition. There is something intrinsically architectural in their forms and in their placement in the gallery. Perhaps because they act as particles or models of larger structures.

Per la sua prima mostra personale a Milano, Armando Andrade Tudela presenta un gruppo di lavori prodotti interamente nel 2015. Con il titolo Post-Folklore queste opere danno un senso di continuità e di rottura nel processo del lavoro dell'artista. Materiali e forme si ripetono con diversi usi e configurazioni e divengono contemporaneamente un'iterazione di un lavoro precedente o il suo opposto.

Secondo l'artista l'assimilazione della cultura (e dei suoi modelli estetici) è un processo di stratificazione per lo più involontario: come in archeologia, essa è matrice su cui sono intervenuti infiniti fattori fino a determinarne la forma attuale.

Le opere di Armando Andrade Tudela diventano allora esercizio pratico di una necessità personale di comprendere e riorganizzare la conoscenza. I paradigmi culturali si fanno griglie fitte su grandi superfici specchianti. La stratificazione del sapere si trasforma in metodologia precisa, un lungo processo che dà forma ad architetture postmoderne in gesso. La storia del mondo si innesta in quella personale (il modulo ripetuto nei collage è la carta di una pasticceria frequentata dall'artista).

Nei lavori di Andrade Tudela elementi simili danno vita a forme differenti, rendendo impossibile la scissione tra matrice e stampo, tra causa ed effetto. Ciò che importa è il processo che dà vita all'evento creativo, al manufatto artistico.

Le opere condividono un terreno comune. Dalle sculture simili ad una falange allungata sul pavimento, agli alti specchi sulle pareti, la maggior parte di queste opere ruotano attorno al concetto di stabilità, equilibrio, verticalità e composizione dello spazio. Hanno qualcosa di intrinsecamente architettonico nella forma e nella loro collocazione in galleria. Forse perché agiscono come particelle o modelli di strutture più grandi.

Dear Massimo,
many apologies for my delay. Writing these notes has taken more time than expected. The reason is that there have been many versions of this show and by extension, any attempt to annotate and describe a definitive reading has felt unnatural. These notes are about some of these versions rather than about the works, acknowledging that there is still one last iteration to be produced during the montage.

First there was your studio visit, which provided me of a first schema for the show. With this in mind I decide to develop certain ideas that were hidden behind the works you and Alessandra saw. At the time we were developing at the studio a savoir faire in relation to a new group of plaster sculptures, most of which had to do with pressuring and extending the surface of objects. The act of stressing a material until it reveals an unexpected reaction was (and is) at the core of most works and has been a running thread for the show. Same goes for the idea that most works come from the re-assemblage of broken pieces.

At some point during the process I decided to have a look at Scarpa's Gypsoteca Canoviana as a way to understand the rapport between plaster, support and space.

A group of new ideas sprang from the relation between Scarpa's display system and Canova's sculptures of bodies and heads (at some point I imagined the show being about the co-dependance between the body and the different things we use to hold ourselves up). I altered the Scarpa reference by drawing curves on a couple of his designs to be then re-produced by hand, if only to encourage possible imprecisions. My way of stating what today is perhaps obvious: everything is a product of *mestizaje.

After extending the date of the opening, I had the chance of reviewing what has been done and decided to open up the process. I was producing the green 'acid works' in denim that felt to me extremely somatic and had an air of post-war painting.

In response I decided to include as part of the show a very Psycho-geometrical fabric I had seen and bought during last year visit to Peru. These works were intended to be very light, precarious even, somehow representing the two hemispheres always at play in my work. By including them, I tried to create a sort of dialectical trap as you move through the works: things that come from different directions being paired in a common space. In fact, this is probably the only real version of huesos de bambú: the show as a 'dialectical trap'.

Un abrazo and see you tomorrow

Caro Massimo,
perdonami per il ritardo. Scrivere questi appunti ha richiesto più tempo del previsto. La ragione è che ci sono state molte versioni di questa mostra e, di conseguenza, ogni tentativo di commentare e descrivere una versione definitiva risultava innaturale. Le considerazioni finali riguardano alcune di queste versioni più che le opere in sé, considerando che c'è ancora un'ultima iterazione da realizzare durante l'allestimento.

Prima di tutto c'è stata la tua visita al mio studio, che mi ha permesso di formulare una prima idea della mostra. Con questo in mente ho deciso di sviluppare certe idee che erano nascoste dietro ai lavori che tu e Alessandra avete visto. In quel momento in studio stavamo sviluppando un certo savoir faire in relazione a un nuovo gruppo di sculture in gesso, molte delle quali riguardavano i processi di compressione ed estensione della superficie degli oggetti. L'idea di stressare un materiale fino a quando rivelò una reazione inaspettata era (ed è) al centro di molte opere e è stato un filo conduttore per la mostra. Così come l'idea che molti lavori nascano dal riassemblaggio di pezzi rotti.

A un certo punto durante la preparazione decido di andare a vedere la Gipsoteca Canoviana di Scarpa in modo da approfondire il rapporto tra gesso, supporto e spazio.

Un gruppo di nuove idee nasce dalla relazione tra l'allestimento di Scarpa e le sculture di corpi e teste di Canova (a un certo punto ho immaginato una mostra sulla reciproca dipendenza tra il corpo e differenti oggetti che utilizziamo per sostenerci). Ho alterato il riferimento a Scarpa tracciando curve su un paio di suoi disegni, poi riprodotti a mano, anche solo per incoraggiare possibili imprecisioni. Il mio modo di affermare ciò che oggi è magari ovvio: tutto deriva dalla *mestizaje.

Dopo aver posticipato la data di apertura, ho avuto l'opportunità di rivedere ciò che era stato fatto e decido di estendere il processo. Stavo realizzando gli 'acid works' in tessuto denim che mi sono sembrati estremamente corporei e hanno un non so che di pittura post-bellica.

Decido dunque di includere come parte della mostra un vero e proprio tessuto psico-geometrico che ho visto e comprato durante la mia permanenza in Perù lo scorso anno. Questi lavori vogliono essere molto leggeri, quasi precari, rappresentano in qualche modo i due emisferi che sempre sono presenti nel mio lavoro. Includendoli entrambi, ho tentato di creare una sorta di trappola dialettica in cui cadere muovendosi tra le opere: cose che provengono da direzioni differenti condividono lo stesso spazio. In effetti, questa è probabilmente la sola versione di huesos de bambú: la mostra come 'trappola dialettica'.

Un abrazo e ci vediamo domani

Silviano Andrade Tuude's artwork consists of 100 small, square photographs arranged in a grid, which were taken in the 1950s in Peru.

The first series part of 20 of the prints, La vereda de la montaña, was exhibited at the 1957 exhibition 'Círculo de Fotógrafos' in the Faculty of Fine Arts of the University of Lima. In 1960, he exhibited his work in the 'Exposición de Fotografía en el Perú' at the Museo de Arte de la Universidad Católica del Perú. La vereda de la montaña is one of the most important series of the artist, which gives witness to his way of seeing the landscape.

This series is also included in the collection of the Museo de Arte Contemporáneo de Bogotá, Colombia, and the Museo de Arte Contemporáneo de Monterrey, Mexico. The series consists of 100 small photographs of the Andes mountain range, which Andrade took during his stays in the mountains of Peru, where he worked as a teacher.
